

LEARN ABOUT

- First Nation culture
- Indigenous hunting methods
- Traditional trapping and snaring

Kaaren Dannenmann is a Namekosipiw Anishinaapekwe or Trout Lake community member, Lac Seul First Nation member, Teacher and trapper. She lives in Red Lake, Ontario with her partner, children and grandchildren.

Kaaren has been trapping on Trout Lake for several decades, as taught to her by family members who have lived there for countless generations.

Kaaren is a traditional person and has always had a respect for the land and all our relations on the land. She recognizes the long held traditions of her people by teaching others about Anishinaape ways of being on the land.

Traditional Land Teachings Workshop

The Manitoba Archaeological Society and the Association of Manitoba Archaeologists are proud to introduce Kaaren Dannenmann who will be teaching a workshop to interested students. Those wanting to learn about traditional lifeways and Subarctic economic pursuits will find this an educational, interesting and valuable experience.

This workshop will present medicine wheel teachings, customary practices as well as the ethical treatment of animals and the land. Trapping and snaring information will also be offered.
